The Occupy movement began in 2011 with a series of protests against corporate greed and economic inequality. The protests quickly spread to cities across the United States and around the world. Generation Occupy is the continuation of that movement, and its members are committed to fighting for the same goals.

Generation Occupy is a diverse movement that includes people from all walks of life. However, they are united by a common belief that the American dream is no longer attainable for most people. They believe that the economy is rigged in favor of the wealthy and powerful, and that the political system is broken. They are fighting to create a more just and equitable society, where everyone has a fair shot at success.

Generation Occupy is using a variety of tactics to achieve its goals. They are organizing protests, lobbying politicians, and working to build a new political movement. They are also working to create alternative institutions, such as worker cooperatives and community gardens, that can help to meet the needs of people who have been left behind by the current system.

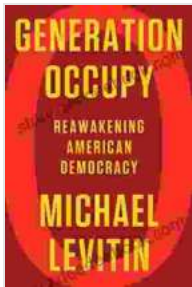

Generation Occupy is a powerful force for change. They are the future of American democracy, and they are determined to create a better world for themselves and for generations to come.

Here are some of the key issues that Generation Occupy is fighting for:

- Economic justice: Generation Occupy believes that the economy should work for everyone, not just the wealthy few. They are fighting for policies that will create jobs, raise wages, and reduce poverty.
- Social equality: Generation Occupy believes that everyone should have the same opportunities, regardless of their race, gender, sexual orientation, or religion. They are fighting for policies that will end discrimination and promote equality.
- Political reform: Generation Occupy believes that the political system is broken. They are fighting for reforms that will make it more democratic and responsive to the needs of the people.

Generation Occupy is a movement that is growing in strength every day. They are the future of American democracy, and they are determined to create a better world for themselves and for generations to come.
