The four subjects of the film are:

- Ryan Haack: A young man with cerebral palsy who dreams of becoming a professional wrestler.
- Matt Hamill: A deaf wrestler who won a silver medal at the 2008 Olympics.

- Emily Cook: A blind runner who has competed in the Paralympic Games.
- Jamey Jewells: A transgender woman who is pursuing her dream of becoming a professional bodybuilder.

Each of these individuals has faced their own unique set of challenges, but they have all refused to give up on their dreams. The film follows their extraordinary journeys as they strive to achieve their goals and make a difference in the world.

Super Almost Super is a truly inspiring story that will leave you feeling motivated and empowered. The film is a reminder that anything is possible if you are willing to work hard and never give up on your dreams.

The Power of Passion

One of the most striking things about the subjects of Super Almost Super is their unwavering passion for their chosen pursuits. They are all incredibly driven and determined to achieve their goals, no matter what obstacles they face.

This passion is what fuels their perseverance and keeps them going even when things get tough. It is also what makes their stories so inspiring. They are a reminder that anything is possible if you have the passion and the drive to make it happen.

Overcoming Adversity

The subjects of Super Almost Super have all faced their own unique set of challenges. Ryan Haack has cerebral palsy, Matt Hamill is deaf, Emily

Cook is blind, and Jamey Jewells is transgender. These challenges could have easily held them back, but they refused to let them define them.

Instead, they used their challenges as motivation to achieve their dreams. They showed the world that anything is possible if you are willing to work hard and never give up.

Making a Difference

The subjects of Super Almost Super are not only inspiring because of their individual achievements. They are also inspiring because they are using their platforms to make a difference in the world.

Ryan Haack is a motivational speaker who talks to young people about overcoming adversity. Matt Hamill is a coach who helps other deaf wrestlers achieve their goals. Emily Cook is a Paralympic athlete who inspires other blind people to pursue their dreams. Jamey Jewells is a transgender advocate who works to raise awareness of transgender issues.

These individuals are all using their stories to make the world a better place. They are showing the world that anything is possible, no matter what challenges you face.

Super Almost Super is a truly inspiring story that will leave you feeling motivated and empowered. The film is a reminder that anything is possible if you are willing to work hard and never give up on your dreams.

The subjects of the film are all living proof that you can overcome any challenge and achieve your dreams. They are an inspiration to us all to never give up on our own dreams, no matter how big or small they may be.
